AREA SCIENTIFICA – KEY WORDS: In collaboration with European health and social service professional bodies, European level university networks, and other public and civil society organisations, the project aims to build upon the achievement of previous relevant public mental health promotion projects through careful consultation and collaboration with them. It also seeks to involve new non-traditional, marginalised and socially excluded actors such as mental health service users in this process. The project will identify and disseminate public policy guidelines for best generic training and education practice with respect to mental health promotion and illness reduction for adults (18-65). To this it adds specific applications with respect to the prevention of suicide, depression, and alcohol and drug abuse.
